NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON VISION OF FUTURE EDUCATION

A "National Conference on the Vision of Future Education" sounds like an excellent platform to discuss and shape the future of education in the country. Define a clear theme for the conference that reflects the vision for the future of education. Possible focus areas could include innovative teaching methods, technology integration, curriculum development, lifelong learning, inclusive education, and sustainability in education. Encourage researchers, scholars, and practitioners to submit abstracts and present their work on innovative approaches to education. This could include empirical studies, case analyses, and theoretical frameworks that offer practical insights and solutions. Facilitate interactive sessions such as panel discussions, roundtable forums, and Q&A sessions to encourage dialogue and collaboration among participants. These sessions can address critical issues and challenges facing the future of education and explore potential solutions.

The image shows a Zoom meeting interface. The main content is a slide with text about pedagogical skills. The text on the slide reads: "instructing can be understood as preparatory teaching. Etymologically it conveys some funny message. Paidagogos, the root implies 'slave who took children to and from school pedagogue' (Your Dictionary, American Heritage Dictionary of English Language, 5th Edition). At this level I set aside the Technology tag of the title and will continue our discussion focused on Pedagogical Skill only which really is the core concept of our Topic. Professional skill of every individual teacher is important as it contributes to the pedagogical practices of others. Hence, many a time the stress is on enhancing of professional skills which leads to efficiency of the individual professional which results in development and yields his organization. Pedagogical Skill includes all types of skills related to the profession of teaching. But in a wider context these skills presuppose a critical approach regarding teaching learning and assessment (www.bth.se > 2016/03 Pedagogical Skills). Pedagogical skills are built on one's own (deep) extensive (bread) and updated knowledge within the field. More over it also includes the competence to relate the teaching with the real world." CONFERNCES ON 2019-20

The one-day National Conference on Advanced Management, IT, Education, and Social Science held on April 27, 2019, in Manegma aimed to bring together scholars, researchers, educators, and practitioners from diverse fields to discuss and exchange ideas on recent advancements, challenges, and opportunities in these areas. Here's an overview of the conference. The conference theme focused on advancements in management, information technology (IT), education, and social science disciplines. The objectives included exploring innovative practices, emerging trends, and interdisciplinary approaches in these fields. Researchers, academicians, and practitioners presented their original research papers, case studies, and theoretical contributions related to management, IT, education, and social science. Presentations covered a wide range of subtopics within each discipline. Panel discussions were organized to delve deeper into specific themes or issues within management, IT, education, and social science domains. Panelists shared their expertise, experiences, and perspectives, stimulating meaningful dialogue and knowledge exchange. The conference concluded with a closing ceremony, where participants were recognized for their contributions, and awards were presented to outstanding papers, presenters, and contributors.

The poster features a dark blue background with a faint image of a hand moving a chess piece. At the top left is the Srinivas University logo.
